Country Economic Forecast

Romania

Highlights

- Although quarterly growth slowed to 0.1% in Q1, this followed two very strong quarters and still meant that the economy was 3.8% up on a year earlier, the fastest in the EU. Household consumption was the main driver of economic growth, up 6.6% year-on-year, comfortably its strongest rate since before the global financial crisis. And while Q2 may see some setback for consumption after the sharp rise in Q1, we expect a robust underlying trend in the coming quarters. By contrast, both government consumption and investment contracted in Q1, but the latter should start to pick up soon in response to the marked improvement in both exports and consumer spending over the last year. With regard to the external sector, the likely boost to exports from the gradual Eurozone recovery is likely to be outweighed by faster domestic demand sucking in more imports. Overall, we have raised our 2014 GDP growth forecast to 3% from 2.8% last month.
- CPI inflation was just 0.9% in May, the lowest on record. In large part, the latest decline was driven by
- we do not believe that the central bank will lower the policy interest rate any further (it last cut in February). The central bank attributes recent currency strength to external factors and it believes inflation will pick up in the coming months.
- The IMF remains confident in Romania's ability to implement meaningful structural reform. However, policymakers still need to make a lot of progress if they are to achieve the IMF targets. While Romgaz was privatised last year, energy sector assets Hidroelectrica and Oltenia have yet to be sold off. In addition, despite likely opposition from the IMF, the government will probably implement a 5% cut in the payroll tax rate as it looks to spur growth. Overall, though, the government remains committed to its policy goals and we believe it will continue to work towards meeting its fiscal targets and reform objectives.
- Although we have upgraded Romania's economic prospects, there remain risks from a more severe Ukraine crisis, a reversal to the modest Eurozone

Abstract

This article uses a literature review about postponement, decoupling point and cold chain to offer alternatives for Brazilian distribution of refrigerated chicken. It was possible to conclude that a decoupling point between first and further industrialization can be a viable option for selling and distributing refrigerated chicken that has from seven to maximum of thirty days of shelf life.

Reverse Innovation at Spere

A Case Study in China

One company's reverse innovation experience reveals how internal resistance can hamper the reversal of the technology flow—and how it can be overcome.

Simone Corsi, Alberto Di Minin, and Andrea Piccaluga

Reverse innovation is not always either foreseeable or explicitly pursued by Western companies operating in emerging markets. It arises from the initiative of the foreign subsidiary and results when products initially developed in the emerging market threaten the primary market of the parent company. This has been the case for a Chinese company that developed a product exclusively for the Chinese market that, surprisingly, was eventually adopted in the market for which it was developed. The development of the product presented challenges at both the subsidiary and the corporate levels.

What is 'Peer Review'?

“The process of obtaining impartial opinions from the research and academic community in order to ascertain whether papers submitted for publication in journals or at conferences are of a suitable standard.

The opinions are sought by publishers and conference organizers, and are requested from those whose expertise and stature are similar to the author's.”

Abstract (summary)

Specifically, while our early concerns centered on the dramaturgy of the production (for example, the strategic editing of the script and the production design), at the end of the process, we came to appreciate the infrastructural context on which the play depended. [...]this essay will discuss the dramaturgy (theory and praxis) of the production itself, and the historical, artistic, and material contexts in which our production team collaborated on Voices in 2013. The protests seemed to revive the long dormant "Left coalition." Since the early days of the Obama administration, the Tea Party has provided the Right with a tenuous coalition, which mobilizes a constituency despite internal contradictions between libertarians, such as Rand Paul, and more fundamentalist conservatives like Ted Cruz. [...]the inability to cast representatively is a symptom of an inadequate infrastructure facilitating connections between communities of color and the predominantly white, Left activist communities and academic Left of UW-Madison, both of which represented the core of the production team. Because of this staging and the fact that the monologues interrupted one another, the characters appeared to be in dialogue-as if these historical figures were debating their ideas at a kitchen table.

Boolean Operator #3 – NOT Search

Search Example 5 : Search for documents that contain the word Clean Energy, but do NOT include the word Nuclear.

- NOT Search : Connect two words with the operator 'NOT' like “clean energy” NOT nuclear.

What is NOT SEARCH?

Search Scope of NOT SEARCH

Search the contents that have Word 'A', but exclude results that also contain Word 'B'.

Image of NOT SEARCH

The content includes the word 'Clean Energy', but it does not have 'Nuclear' in the texts.

Search by author's name

Search Example 6 : Search contents written by Prof. Paul Krugman

- Open [Advanced Search] ⇒ Enter Krugman, Paul
⇒ Change the dropdown menu to [Author - AU]
- Names are entered in Surname, First Name order in academic database

Keyword Search vs. Subject Search

Search Example 7 : Compare the results between the keyword search and subject search with a keyword Social Change

- For Subject Search, open [Advanced Search] ⇒ Enter “social change”
⇒ Change the dropdown menu to [Subject heading - MAINSUBJECT]

The screenshot displays the ProQuest website's search interface. At the top, the 'ProQuest' logo is on the left, and navigation icons (refresh, folder, user, help) are on the right. Below the header, a navigation bar contains 'Basic Search', 'Advanced Search' (highlighted with a red box), 'Publications', 'Browse', and 'Databases (12)'. The 'Advanced Search' section is active, showing tabs for 'Command Line', 'Recent searches', 'Thesaurus', 'Field codes', and 'Search tips'. The main search area has a text input field containing '"social change"' (highlighted with a red box) followed by 'in' and a dropdown menu set to 'Subject heading – MAINSUBJECT' (highlighted with a red box). A red arrow points from the text in the list above to this dropdown menu. Below the first search row, there is a second row with a dropdown set to 'AND', an empty text field, 'in', and a dropdown set to 'Anywhere'. At the bottom left of the search area is a '+ Add a row' button. To the right of the first search row is a 'Look up Subjects' link.

Keyword Search vs. Subject Search

Keyword Search

The content actually has the keyword(s) in its texts. However, its main theme may be about different topics.

Subject Search

The content may not state the keyword anywhere in the texts. However, its main theme is about the keyword and therefore the content is strongly relevant.

What is ProQuest Central?

ProQuest Central is the largest, multidisciplinary, full-text database available in the market today. This resource provides access to 47 of ProQuest's complete databases, with a variety of content types across over 175 subjects, making this the broadest single research resource in the world. Unlike other resources, ProQuest Central is made up of separate, fully searchable databases which may be used together or separately. ProQuest Central won the Software & Information Industry Association (SIIA) 2010 CODiE Award for Best Online General Reference Service.

While ProQuest Central provides access to millions of much-coveted full text articles from thousands of scholarly journals, it also provides access to information not available in other aggregated resources such as:

- Over 100,000 full text dissertations in the areas of business, psychology, physical sciences, health, education and more
- Over 455,000 working papers from organizations such as NBER and OECD
- Millions of up-to-date company reports, market and industry reports, and
